New Era, New Opportunities

For hundreds of years surveyors have been the tried and true professional when it came to mapping. So why are they having to learn new vocabulary and technology, that has to do with mapping their environment? We will present the overwhelming statistical that has tipped the surveyor's world side-ways! You will learn the 10 new reasons why the IT and GIS world are here to stay and how you can play an important role in this new era.

11:00 Janet Jackson, Intersect

GIS from A to Z

This session will offer you a quick and easy way to learn some of the most common GIS terms and their meanings; such as the difference between geocoding and georeferencing. Are you prepared to discuss your client's feature attributes that are needed for their data dictionary or should you let someone else handle those comments? At the end of this session, you will be saying and spelling new GIS words faster than you can say personal geodatabase. Be sure to bring a notepad and pencil - a short quiz will allow you to test your new vocabulary.
